SCIENTIFIC PUBLICATIONS

The scientific activity of Tiziana Emmi is documented by 28 publications in extenso (including 2 monographs, 5 journal articles – of which 4 in Class A journals –, 17 book chapters and 4 reviews) and one edited volume.

Her research focuses on theoretical and descriptive linguistics, historical linguistics and language teaching. It develops along five main lines of investigation:

- i. inflectional and lexical morphology of Italian and dialects, with particular reference to word formation in both modern and historical Sicilian (from synchronic and diachronic perspectives), the history of linguistic thought, studies on Wortbildung, and the analysis of the treatment of word formation in grammars;
- ii. phraseology, both from a theoretical perspective and with regard to the treatment of complex lexical units in grammars and dictionaries;
- iii. the relationship between literature and dialect, with particular attention to marked lexical and syntactic usages in literary texts;
- iv. language acquisition, interlanguage, and language learning;
- v. contact linguistics, with particular reference to interference phenomena between Sicilian and Italian/Tuscan, and between Sicilian and Gallo-Italic varieties.
